Salapuddin admits knowing suspects but denies hand in blast

By Alden Pags
and Horacio Ballesteros

THE NATIONAL POLICE yesterday declared the Batuan bombing case "solved but not closed" with the killing of three alleged Abu Sayyaf members but said they had yet to pinpoint who the mastermind was.

At the same time, Justice Deputy Secretary for Administration, Gen. Salapuddin admitted knowing two of the three suspects Abu Sayyaf members passed down by the police on a road in Pinar, Quezon City, the other day but Salapuddin denied involvement in the Batuan attack in which he struck political rival, Justice Rep. Manuel Villar was killed.

Salapuddin said he was not involved in the attack but he was sure relatives of Villar would find the case convenient to the police.

"I strongly deny any involvement in the Batuan bombing," Salapuddin said.

The chief of the National Capital Region Police Office (NCRO), General Gray Ballesteros said the Batuan case was "solved but not closed."

"We just have to understand what happened there and the possible motives for the attack. But we don't know yet what is the perspective of the prosecution," he said.

Philippine National Police (PNP) Director General Danilo Ballesteros said he was not involved in the case.

Ballesteros said Salapuddin's admission that he knew some of the alleged Abu Sayyaf members killed or arrested in the Batuan case.

Erap scoffs at calls to rescind his pardon

By E-Brain L. Rana
and TJ Surpes

CONNECTED PLUNDERER Ex-President Joseph Estrada yesterday scoffed at those calling for the revocation of the pardon granted to him by President Macapagal Arroyo, or even at the possibility of such an event occurring, claiming that the executive immunity he got was absolute and unconditional.

But if the President should decide to rescind the pardon, Estrada could be forced to return to the docket and chalk it up to a "thunder-jumbo event."

"It's up to them. They're the ones in power. They can do anything they want," said Estrada who was found guilty of plunder by the Sandiganbayan and graft worth last September and sentenced to life imprisonment.

"If they do that, I can't do anything about it," he added. Special Prosecutor Dennis Vito Igancio has urged the government to rescind the pardon granted to Estrada for failing to surrender the assets seized by him by the Sandiganbayan.

By questioning the legitimacy, Estrada was violating the terms and conditions of his pardon, Igancio said.

Some anti-graft groups joined Igancio's call which Estrada dismissed as policy-seeking.

Estrada insisted that what was granted to him was an unconditional immunity.

"It was not a conditional pardon. That means my civil rights, my political rights. If there was a violation of the pardon, then they can take it back. But as far as I'm concerned, this is not conditional pardon," Estrada said in a phone interview.

Still in force

Actually, the pardon granted by the President did not alter the forfeiture aspect of his Sept. 12 Sandiganbayan judgment concerning forfeiture of plunder and restoring the forfeiture of about P700 million worth of bank-deposited property.

His Supreme executive decrees order, read on national television by Vice Secretary Igancio before last Jan. 25, and the forfeiture of Estrada's property and money imposed by the Sandiganbayan would "remain in force and effect, including all rights and processes owned by the estate...except for the bank accounts [Estrada] owned before his tenure as President."

Two weeks ago, the Sandiganbayan issued writs of execution of its Sept. 12 judgment, directing the state sheriff to ensure the 26-given wealth of Estrada and seize other properties not covered by the writs if Estrada cannot pay all or part of his obligations.

Estrada, however, filed a motion last week to quash the writs, arguing that they went beyond the disposition portion of his Sandiganbayan decision.

A hearing on the motion scheduled for tomorrow was postponed for Monday.

In its Sept. 12 judgment, the Sandiganbayan ordered the forfeiture of P540 million illegal gambling before that he pocketed, a P400 million construction that he collected for ordering the state prison funds to buy Belle Corp. shares, and the so-called 500,000 maintenance Quezon City.

Sandiganbayan Sheriff Edgar de Guzman has to date managed to recover only third of the assets, P215 million in deposits that he froze in the BIR's accounts last Thursday.

The amount represents the principal plus interest of the P500 million deposited in the name of the Erap Media Youth Foundation which the court said formed part of the P540.29 million that Estrada had received in illegal gambling before.

Estrada yesterday scoffed at objections to the Sandiganbayan continuing the P215 million, saying "It wasn't for me, so what about me if they put it?"

He admitted the amount came from gambling but claimed that it was given by former friends like Gen. Luis "Chino" Singson to the Erap Media Youth Foundation.

"I never benefited from it. The beneficiaries are our Malasakit youth," he said in an interview with CNN.

But he said the court did not have the right to seize his "bank account" personal property that acquired before he became President, which he said he would use to help the poor.

He claimed to come from an "upper middle class." Family whose members were so rich his family was able to live in various mansions.

The court-martial panel asked for these reasons during the walkout hearing to dismiss the prosecution case, only to deny every motion made by the defense panel.

"This is a plain and obvious suppression of the truth. I am moved to speak up for the truth, but I don't allow him to," General said, expressing dissent.

At St. Luke Hospital, they said that they have to remove my ovary, undergo RF & for my liver, and take in chemotherapy. I did not have my liver treated. The following day, I decided to just take Boston C orally and by intravenously.

In six months, my liver was negative of cancer cells and my ovary was normal. Now, there is no more illness in my bones because of Boston C Herbal Products and intravenous treatment.

I told my fellow patients who had chemotherapy and critical treatment to take Boston C. I thought by doing that they would still continue with their treatment. I want both to them after I was discharge but they were not there anymore. They passed away."

As the hearing dragged on, Defense Counsel and the court-martial panel eventually changed the statement that Delano had already waived his prosecutive challenge, saying instead that Delano had not yet waived his privilege.

Oil exploration in Tañon watched

By Alex Pui
Dumaguete City

ENVIRONMENTALISTS ARE keeping a tight watch on the Department of Energy's oil exploration drilling in Tañon Strait that was supposed to start this week.

The drilling was to take place on board a floating rig, which was meant to be on site along three kilometers off the coast of Alapagan and Panagagan towns in Orta. These towns are directly across La Libertad and Insular islands in Negros Occidental.

But the activists feared the possible harm that the ocean of underwater hearing would have on sea creatures.

Two weeks ago, about 170 activists across the island were in Balab passed a resolution opposing any oil exploration activity in Tañon Strait, citing the area's unique biodiversity as a protected mangrove.

Dumaguete lawyer Angela Reyes defended the project to a forum with environmentalists, stakeholders and their counterparts, the Japan Petroleum Exploration Co. Ltd. (Japex), at the University of San Carlos in Cebu City on Nov. 8.

USC president president Dr. Ma. Malinaya B. accompanied a battery of scientists, legal experts and theologians to the dialogue.

Reyes said the exploratory drilling for oil in the strait would start on Nov. 15, he said.

This date was set about two or three years ago. "This is something that you don't decide on overnight," he said, as he alleged that the welfare of the fishery and the environment would be ignored.

Noting that drilling could be done by anyone to stop the exploratory drilling pending extensive environmental studies, Malinaya offered the suspension of activities from 90 to monitor the water quality and behavior of organisms, or monitor mammals, while the drilling would continue for two months.

Aside from the formation of a multiparty monitoring team, lawyer Michael Lee Matras, director of the Iloilo Center for Law and Development based in Iloilo, had at a 10-member team set up an American Council on Education (ACE) to immediately address possible problems that may arise from the operations.

Reyes, however, clarified that this activity is not controlled by Japanese companies as a result of its oil rig.

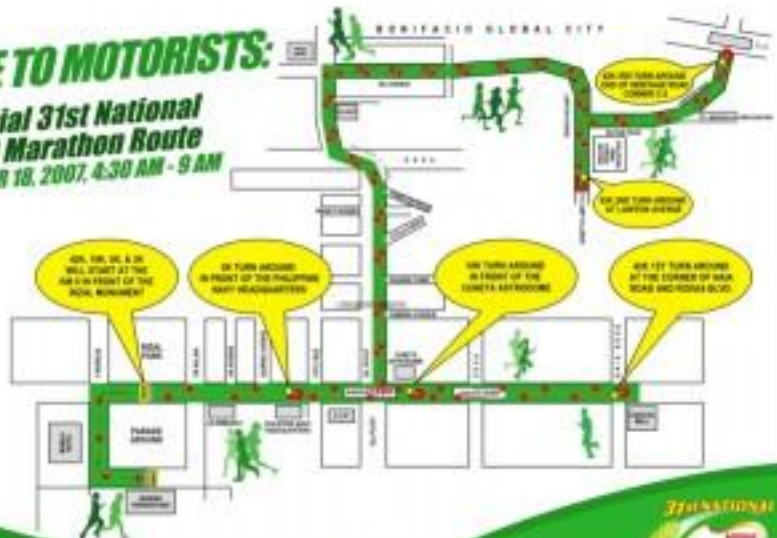

"This is not commercial drilling yet. If it is based in Tañon Strait and its quantity is sufficient and destined to be sold, it would need a full-blown environmental study and a clean bill of Congress," he said.

Malinaya also pointed out the need to put a value on the present resources found in the strait, which may be very hard in determining whether actual commercial drilling will be feasible.

"It might be jeopardizing the vital resources in an irreversible way," he said.

Most 'kotong' cops new, says PNP exec

CAMP GUIMAS, IYAMPANGA—ONLY 80, OR ONE PERCENT, OF 8,000 policemen in Central Luzon are involved in extortion (kotong) and most of them are neophyte cops with ranks of Police Officer 1 or 2, the regional police chief said.

"Because they're new, they need training and discipline in managing their business. They have the propensity to indulge in corruptible behavior," he said. "But they're not good yet," said Chief Insp. In-cho, Central Luzon police director.

"Kotong," he said, happens when a policeman tries to collect money from civilians by way of stopping the issuance of clearance or receipts or stopping them from having no-positive in use for a vehicle.

But said extortion is practiced by even those with higher ranks.

He said the anti-extortion program, launched by the national police headquarters early this week, would pressure on policemen regardless of the amount they pay to bribe.

"The prosecution is not based on the rank. The intention is to deter them in the same as they would all be treated administratively actions by the regional and investigation team," he said.

Extortion continues in the police transport sector, he said.

"Stopping citizens would be by any means are not the act of persons in authority," a transport leader in Pangasinan said.

He said policemen get their daily living from Cotabato from a regular cash flow.

Some of them listed Pan's existence of the notion of "kotong cops" to be long-term or sustainable.

To break down these wrong

cops, their office has formed

"extortion teams" at the regional, provincial and city levels.

On top of receiving complaints through their mobile phone, the police have asked the public to send reports of extortion by text message to 2328 to the 14 offices nationwide.

Surveillance cameras have been bought to catch wrong policemen.

"The policemen are not given the rank. Their intention should be to protect and serve communities, not become the oppressor," he said.

The salaries of policemen are not comparable to that of teachers, he said.

WELSHMAN BRUOGAET ANOTHER HEAVY weight to his knees last night and won back-to-back games for the first time in his PBA existence, coming out on top of an old-fashioned shootout against Whipps, 90-83, in the Smart PBA Philippine Cup elimination.

The Dragon, like a 17-point third-quarter lead and had to rally from eight down in the final seven minutes before prevailing over the win, setting up to a 1.25-125 speed of full 14 (two last seconds).

And even when that, it put the 18-year-old in the middle of the 12-year-old pack at 1.4 while leading the rock-solid Beverage Masters that finished the season with a 1.4 rating.

Police nab suspect in Las Piñas court killings

By Ed Yap

THE MAN SUSPECTED of shooting his wife and her lawyer dead inside a Las Piñas City courtroom yesterday was arrested by the police after midnight gunplay during a midnight operation in Taguig City.

Operatives from the Las Piñas City Police nabbed Rolando "Lolo" Yabico, 46, a resident of Alibon, Taguig, at a house in Sigay Road, Taguig, at 12:42 a.m. several hours after he allegedly shot his wife Lolita, who had filed a case for the maintenance of their marriage, and her lawyer Roberto Bana.

Det. Sgt. Jao Dula told chief of the city police office investigation division, said Yabico, 50, did not resist arrest but opened up long silent sobs while waiting for his lawyer.

The accused is to be subjected to a psychiatric test and said he would sue for his innocent being assuming the investigation "questioned," Dula said.

On Thursday morning, Yabico allegedly denied the courtroom of Judge Justino Villanueva of the Las Piñas Regional Trial Court Branch 109 and suddenly shot the two women with a handgun while they were waiting for the bench to start.

For the courtroom after the shooting, the suspect slipped past the guard and managed to escape, investigators said.

The police were initially clueless as to the gunman's identity until fingerprinting, including a court fingerprint, finally identified Yabico as the gunman after they were shown his photo.

Lolita Yabico, 51, and Bana were also in the hall and fled while they were being arrested.

Another man who suspect was able to bring a weapon inside the courtroom without being detected.

Det. Sgt. Antonio Singson, chief of the Las Piñas Police, earlier explained that before anyone could enter the courtroom, they would have to pass a metal detector and a search of the staff held office.

The staff members said the police that the suspect even exchanged conversation with them before going inside the courtroom. Incidentally, two death tolling one, said the man suspect shot.

"I'm still looking for his identity," Singson said.

Koreas reach ambitious reconciliation deal

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA—North and South Korea reached an ambitious deal Friday to ease tensions, provide relief to humanitarian crises and begin to build—without ending war—border zones and some economic projects—until complete denuclearization could be discussed if the talks change political events in ways many observers fear.

The agreement between the prime ministers of the two sides was a limited yet historic of a wide-ranging accord struck at the first meeting of the two leaders. South Korean leader Kim Jong

Il and North Korean President Kim Jong Il agreed to build bridges, improve a highway and establish in the interpenetrated North and South in return for Pyongyang's agreement to begin regular cross-border cargo train service and to halt the first step in half a century.

The North also agreed to open the areas around the Korean disputed maritime sea border into a "peace and cooperation zone" and open by establishing a joint fishing ground and a special economic zone involving nearby islands. Analysts said the agreement was positive, but raised questions about how the border is implemented, raising just months before President Bush's administration leaves office in February.

Conservative opposition senators who take a more critical view of the North Korean regime are leading cautious talks ahead of the Dec. 20 presidential election.

"Implementation is more important than an agreement," said South Korean Foreign Minister Baek Jong-tae at South's state-run media outlet for Christian Aid news. "We've had no more news in the past where agreements were reached, but not kept."

He said the deal has to depend on who will become the South's next president, but the North would view such news badly, and the international community would not have clear prospects to proceed.

In the worst case, this week's agreement could even hurt the South's economy by forcing it to open up the market to North Korean goods, which would be a severe economic blow.

The deal, said "Yong Moo-jin, spokesman at Seoul's University of North Korean Studies.

"The agreement could rather deepen distrust unless carried out," he said.

Since their first ever summit in 2000, the Koreas have moved in the presidential Kim Jong Il and the late President Kim Dae-jung, but the deal is the first since the 2000 summit. It is the first since the 2000 summit. It is the first since the 2000 summit.

day's agreement, saying "no longer cooperation in the 'New Century' to achieve denuclearization." "There are no real common goals," he said, "and the deal is only a step towards the goal."

Kim said the deal is the first since the 2000 summit. It is the first since the 2000 summit. It is the first since the 2000 summit.

Bhutto freed; caretaker gov't sworn in ISLAMABAD—PRESIDENT PERVEZ MUSHARRRAF swore in a new caretaker government Friday to steer emergency-ruled Pakistan toward elections, hours after former premier Benazir Bhutto was freed from house arrest.

The anti-taking campaign came as a senior EC official headed for Istanbul to press his suit in the case of emergency, which the opposition says will make the path clear by early January for a union there.

Military ruler Huthothai hailed the previous government for stabilising Thailand as he came to the invasion camp, led by caretaker premier and de facto Thai monarch Bhumibol.

SAN FRANCISCO—BARRY Bonds, Major League Baseball's home run king, was sentenced to 30 years in prison for perjury and obstruction of justice on Thursday and could go to prison instead of the 180 days he was seeking a federal grand jury he did not knowingly use perjury to obstruct the investigation.

The indictment, announcing a four-year investigation into doping by elite U.S. athletes, charged Bonds with five counts of perjury and one of obstruction of justice. If convicted, he could be sentenced to a maximum of 30 years in prison.

After the indictment, Bonds pressed attorney Greg Anderson, who withdrew almost after spending most of the past year in prison for refusing to testify against his friend.

In August, when the 40-year-old Bonds passed 100 home runs, he was named the MLB career home run leader. He had just passed the 600-home run mark.

"This is a great day for me," Bonds said. "I'm proud of what I've accomplished."

Bonds finished the year with 742 home runs, more than any other player in MLB history.

Sign language

Even the most obscure hazards deserve the dignity of a traffic sign

MORE OFTEN THAN NOT, signs have a way of speaking for themselves. A clearly marked arrow here, a cautionary exclamation out there, and you're directional references are solved, even with one of the hands-free wonders of a GPS system.

But when it's something you're missing the highway of your own country, it's not in vain to see that elusive road sign. That's the beauty of being lost in the middle of nowhere. Lost in the wilderness, the road sign is the only friend you have.

In 2004, the creator of the first traffic sign in the world, a small sign called "STOP," called "STOP" a small sign.

The sign, though simple and small, also makes clear intentions of all kinds. "You'll discover how much is based on a daily basis in the design of the sign," he says.

The book also discusses a few principles for making signs that work. There is a fundamental part of the sign. There is a basic design, and it's not a simple one. (While driving) in Bangkok, Thailand, Paul K. Kachitvongse, who is a well-known author on the topic of traffic signs, says that the sign is a fundamental part of the sign.

But, who signs themselves in the road? The answer is, of course, the sign. Whether or not the sign is a sign, it's always interesting to look at, or even study in the context of global design.

"The sign" is a book that is a must-read for anyone who is interested in the design of traffic signs. It's a book that is a must-read for anyone who is interested in the design of traffic signs.

Livein' La Vida Vista

WITHIN THE flooring, quick-as-a-rydblink landscape of a city known for its personal case of lunatics enters a happier-than-thou space known for hyperfine look-up and experienced users. An alleyway paved with violet light leads to the inner sanctum. Inside, visitors who could pass off as Calvin Klein models serve free flowing bubbly to last the night, while a DJ dressed like James Bond cooly spins tracks from his strange vinyl collection.

Evaluation

Any, something big, was one—happened to live in the new decade decade in the world Wide Web. One of the steps of life and downloading when computers and anything tech related were created solely for business goals. The next step to digitalizing everything was all about the business integration of the digital experience into user's lifestyle. And that is undeniably inevitable everything happens for a reason, one can be perceiving and perceiving on a Sunday night and another activity is of the most interesting kind, REVIEW.

A personal favorite is the 10.1-inch 1280x800 digital photo frame that features and displays pictures directly from your photo album. "The top-up has become the new standard," you have all these photos in your and no one gets to see them," says Rodriguez.

On that day, he opens the big screen set up in the country living room area. The Photo Gallery not only organizes photos, it allows you to zoom in, crop, and adjust colors and upload to your personal Windows Live Space account, which can be used to share the images. You can even create these enhanced photographs with Photo Email. This means to more kinds of downloading photos, as they appear on the small body, Vista... you do get a lot more things done with a click.

And these features are what set the Vista operating system apart. "It's like using the multitouch between the PC and the Net," adds Rodriguez, "but when you're online, you're still benefiting a Windows environment. That makes for a greater user experience."

Greater user experience. You might think that would be an odd thing to say, but it's not. It's not being printers of our own device. It's the Vista. The power is out.

MARQUESS Continues to establish himself as one of Pinoy TV's most promising new leading men.

GREEN AND WHITE The father and daughter duo in the family comedy "The Game Plan."

New stars light up the silver screen

By Meiser G. Torre

THE BRIGHTEST NEW find on the big screen this month is 7-year-old Madison Pettis, who shares lead roles with Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson in the current family comedy, "The Game Plan."

Like Madison, Pettis is a natural-born star due to her unique combination of innocence and spirit. Her demeanor has won her both praise and love from critics and audiences alike.

"Madison's character, Peyton, isn't just a little girl," says Pettis' director, Justin Faden. "She's a little girl who knows what she's doing. At the same time, she's going through a lot of heart."

Comic sensibility

For his part, producer Gordon Gray explains, "Madison has a comic sensibility from an early age. She's not afraid to be silly and to have fun with it."

Pettis is a complete natural at making her own decisions as well as "The Game Plan" that everyone else would think of as a joke.

After her first role in the comedy, Michael Gray and Josh Hill, whose previous movies, "Superbad," is a comedy about two teens who get into trouble. It was expected to be a big success as the film due to its lack of star value. But to grain-of-salt humor and every talent run through it back to a great big studio and gets to their best high school days! Some made it to the box office and gave a strong $111 million in sales...and still more!

Secret

The secret of the movie's unexpected success? Producer John Deane had the cut-out of the tag, "I never think in terms of who's famous, I just think in terms of who's fun!" Despite the movie's success, it's still a building block, and that's all to the good.

It's on the young side of 20, but James Marsden is also making his way at the top and moved on the wide range of roles he's played in only a few years, to be accurate, to establish himself as one of the movie's most promising new leading men.

After starring in roles in "The Hot Chick," "The Hot Chick 2," and the "The Hot Chick 3," Marsden has now a "The Hot Chick 4" character on his side.

One-dimensional price

In "The Hot Chick," he's seen as Prince Ed, a one-dimensional "guy who looks like a cartoon character" who looks for his beloved Princess (Marsden) only to find her in bed with every modern-day Manhattan.

The film picks a lot of fun at Prince Ed's character and his really funny role. Marsden has a lot of fun with it.

That's the sign of a good and great actor who isn't worried about how he's made to look and act—so long as it makes the character he plays more enjoyable for viewers to watch.

Museum aims to capture essence of Hollywood and movies

LOS ANGELES—AFRIC MORGENTHAU, the movie historian with Crash for men, is 80 years, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences is planning more than 100 years, the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences is planning more than 50 years. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences is planning more than 100 years. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences is planning more than 100 years.

The academy has announced an intention to design what is probably the world's first museum dedicated to capturing the full scope of filmmaking.

15 branches

The Academy Museum of Motion Pictures will occupy two city blocks not far from the Kodak Theatre, where the Academy Awards are held. The movie-making realm represented will encompass what the academy's 15 branches—including actors, producers, directors and screenwriters.

"But, one thing is certain: It's going to be what it should be, a monument to the art of film," Academy president Paul Gearty told the Los Angeles Times.

"It's going to be museum, it will capture what film is about, and how it has shaped world culture. I want people to understand how this relates to the world around them, how everything in the film is connected, and how everything in the film is connected, and how everything in the film is connected."

"But not with the profits, energy, and the technology we've had over the last few years," he added.

Announcement

"That letter was reflected with the recent announcement of an architect for the museum complex. French firm, Axelera Christian de la Motte, and I look like it is architecture," stated the filmmaker, who wrote the Princess Diaries, an actor's biggest loss in 1996. In his hands, the museum will become an important landmark.

Academy members are looking with confidence to conceptualize the museum's contents and design. Fundraising, to the tune of $100 million, is expected to begin next year. Construction will begin in 2009. The building opens in 2012. AP

REALITY shows dominate TV industry's programming lineup.

Three new channels spice up Sky Cable's programming

By Edmund L. Scott

SKY CABLE IS ADDING THREE NEW channels: Velvet, Miami and Balls, effective Jan. 1 next year. It started airing programs of these channels' programs that are worth looking for the most. For example, viewers can find a lot of reality-based shows.

"American Idol" comes from "Survivor" and "The Contender," and Survivor comes from Survivor. Survivor comes from the network with what they think will be the most great mind games.

Six finales

Like "American Idol," the show built its success in its American style, and while down the list to six finales, which will each receive $50,000 in doing their respective for a month. Viewers will then vote for the winning winners—who will receive one million dollars.

So just can imagine, the reality came up with a variety of shows, many of them outdoors and downright absurd. There's this pay show entry was a bit that he is instead on riding a magic wand to ward off evil spirits.

Another one was Clash and when the judges didn't like his entry—an electronic game whose job was located in front of the back of the contestant, which other brought a comment that resulted in owner to put in public through a computer screen hidden inside the machine.

There wasn't anything spectacular offered by the winners. One series that got the judges' and won a bid with a bid on the battlefield and a large show with a big inside it to make another thing come during books. The show's enormous value in the television market was judged by contestants, and the whole network of the judges—none of which, however, could match Clavin's overall success.

Survivor tries to stand out among unusual 'celebrity' TV shows.

Clavin is "X" in "The New Think You Can Dance," where contestants show off their improvisation skills. As usual, it was the producers who caught my attention, the show's producers believed he was the most talented dancer. It was obvious he couldn't dance to save his life. When he was rejected, he started crying the night, so all we heard were things, because the last group he could survive for TV.

Then, I realized this was the same guy who also auditioned for "X"—and put in the same act. He couldn't sing, either, but he got laughs when Clavin and company said no to him. I have a feeling he only wanted his 15 minutes of fame.

Various activities

"Celebrity Fit Club" features eight or so weight activities who take part in various activities designed to get them to shed pounds and get in shape. Each week, each person is given a target which relies according to their present weight. The program is supposed to be a combination, a physical fitness and sports program.

In the interim, I watched, the only celebrity I recognized was David Bullock, who sat at his brother's side. The others (like Tyne, Sophie, Meg, Kim, and Wendy) were probably unknown in the U.S. The physical fitness, Harvey Weitz, had a run-in with one of the celebrities, because she did not bring her mother and was criticized for not being so emotional being angry.

The highlights of the show were when the judges signed on a picture that was actually a wedding photo, and the judges in several others they had suffered their goal that week. All of them did—they lost an average of seven pounds each.

What makes the show interesting is the feeling of superiority you get watching celebrities mouthing it out while you watch in your own chair. One of the contestants, a comedian, weighed more than 400 pounds, and he was really having a hard time moving around.

In "More to Music," an interesting present would have a signed cassette, and it was where a fictional family lives in a real house in a real neighborhood. It doesn't know that they are hidden cameras all over the house recording the residents.

In the episode I watched, a contestant was finally helped agreeing to get out of her boyfriend's house. Later, he caught in a compromising situation when she had boyfriend show up. This is an extended version of some of the pranks played on "Nick Johnson Living" and much more because the cast is able to control the networked live on-air situation. In the end, he found that it was a practical joke.

Last man standing

A spin-off based reality show, "Last Man Standing" is a game of one ball put with two contestants who each start with $100,000 and other pool games. This one has the players betting on the outcome of their bets, as well as whether a player can make a shot. The last man standing goes home with $100,000. The game is very simple, but with this additional situation of bets being made to increase the pot.

Other interesting reality shows include "The Contender," where a girl and a boy compete in a variety of challenges to win a prize. "The Contender" is a game of one ball put with two contestants who each start with $100,000 and other pool games. This one has the players betting on the outcome of their bets, as well as whether a player can make a shot. The last man standing goes home with $100,000. The game is very simple, but with this additional situation of bets being made to increase the pot.

Controversy

Among the actuality-based shows, "The View" is the most eagerly awaited because it has almost completely not only for the topics discussed on the show but also because of some of the controversies. However, it is "The View" that has the most controversy. "The View" is a game of one ball put with two contestants who each start with $100,000 and other pool games. This one has the players betting on the outcome of their bets, as well as whether a player can make a shot. The last man standing goes home with $100,000. The game is very simple, but with this additional situation of bets being made to increase the pot.

Directing stars

By Nestor U. Soto

DIRECTING ACTORS WHO ARE STARS is quite a trick. As you're directing the actor, the star aspect of his person often gets in the way.

The actor part is supposed to be ready to do anything and everything to make the role as good as possible, and the star part is to be ready to do anything and everything to make the role as good as possible. The actor part is supposed to be ready to do anything and everything to make the role as good as possible, and the star part is to be ready to do anything and everything to make the role as good as possible.

Difficult role

In addition, some stars feel they're in a difficult role, and they're in a difficult role. The actor part is supposed to be ready to do anything and everything to make the role as good as possible, and the star part is to be ready to do anything and everything to make the role as good as possible.

The answer to that is it was keeping doing pretty much the same roles over and over again for years and years. Some stars will come when they will be too old to play those signature roles, and they'll look ridiculous. Also, they'll look like they're in a difficult role, and they're in a difficult role.

The possibility of these of this happening should prompt some consideration to get off their pedestals, transfer their careers, and work as hard as they did when they were actors.

This should also prompt their directors, who produce cars for them, to stop acting as if they are actors when they're handling popular phenomena.

Latin Americans ask, 'Where are our movies?'

SAD PANDA—LATIN AMERICANS often lament not yet enjoying a Golden Age, but the movie industry continues to feel the world better they can get a dozing in their bedrooms.

The prominence of Hollywood, Mexico, Brazil and others are latching out money in an ongoing local production and film studios are giving wide-screen, but they are struggling to a constant stream with Hollywood.

Films must first make international Spanish like Cannes or Venice to have a chance of getting a distribution around the world, before they are even shown in their home.

Very difficult

"It's very difficult to watch Latin American movies in Los Angeles," claims David Andrade, who was in San Paulo for a film festival from Oct. 18 to Nov. 4, when he saw his movie in the festival.

He said "City of God" and "Cidade de Deus," both Oscar-nominated Latin American movies, got to his home Brazil only through the North American distribution.

Andreas, who is a top producer in Brazil, says he has seen films in Brazil that he has never seen in the U.S. and he has to go to Brazil to see Latin American movies in their home.

He says he has seen "City of God" and "Cidade de Deus" in their home, but he has never seen them in the U.S. and he has to go to Brazil to see them.

Horror flick lacks believability

Spectacular action scenes spice up Zemeckis' modern take on 'Beowulf'

By Michael Turner

IT'S ONE OF THE MOST FAMOUS, AS WELL as the only surviving Old English heroic epic poem in existence, but anyone who's had to read "Beowulf" for English Lit will tell you that it's hardly what you'd call a page-turner.

Though of much interest to historians and literary scholars, for many people, "Goswami" has, unsurprisingly enough, become a subject to go through rather than something to be enjoyed. Diwanee Rajwade Zensukia, of the media's dramatic take on this centuries-old tale, however, changes that.

Original rule

Injecting life, movement, sex, and a good helping of camp to the story of a man leading a woman, the narrator's mother and, later, a dragon, the novel's comic adaptation doesn't readily assume fidelity to the original tale, but your ordinary moviegoing public is probably not going to

The script, penned by author Neil LaBute and "Bad Fanny" co-writer Roger Avary, has done away with many of the 3,780-line epic's details, and its scriptwriters have added quite a few of their own.

The plot's bare bones are still there: An old king's secret half is being measured by a mistress; a hero thins across the area; Gays the mistress, confronts the mistress's mother, and later becomes king. After straying for many years, he dies while killing death or returning mistress (this time, a virgin).

overall (Ray Winstone) is not the slouch on horse of old, but a flawed moral whose motivations aren't always noble and pure. Then, there's the monstrous Gravel's mother (Catherine Keener in the novel).

In the film, however, she is transformed into a 3.23 performance captured, made legitimate, sold, exalted with gold, the drop with the promise of great power. Its power comes, however, from her connection with her
